Weekly ReportDirectorate of Administration

-- P&PD/OL has begun publication of a new current intelligence report entitled Mid-Day Intelligence Report (MIR). Various senior government officials are to receive this report by 1300 hours on a daily basis. The production schedule developed for this report allows P&PD only 15 minutes (i.e., 1100-1115 hours) to compose the job and produce master pages to be used by CPAS for further reproduction.

-- OP and Office of Comptroller representatives met with Russ Neeley of OMB to discuss the Agency's proposed retirement legislation. This was a follow-on to the 15 August meeting and was a learning exercise for Mr. Neely on the details of our proposed retirement package. In his questions, Mr. Neeley focused primarily on cost and funding items and was particularly interested in getting dollar figures associated with the enhanced benefits in our proposal. Specific areas on how our legislation would be administered were clarified, and Mr. Neely was advised that the cost estimates for our proposal were developed by our consultant [REDACTED] with actuarial assumptions the same as utilized for analysis of the Stevens/Roth Bill and other retirement proposals under consideration. Mr. Neely found this impressive, and we stated we could involve [REDACTED] in subsequent discussions to clarify technical costs and funding questions. In the interim, we advised Mr. Neeley we would work with [REDACTED] to get answers to OMB's immediate questions on cost comparisons between the current Civil Service system, the Stevens/Roth Bill, and our proposed retirement package. This information will be provided in writing early next week.
